As an applicant for a position with the Indio Police Department, you are required to complete this pre-investigative background questionnaire. This questionnaire supplements your Personal History Statement (PHS) and application and it will be treated in the same manner. Pursuant to the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), you are not required, nor are you expected to furnish any information in this questionnaire that is of a medical nature. For example, do not report any work absences for illness or worker's compensation claims. Do not discuss or report any disabilities you might have. This information is strictly medical in nature and as this questionnaire is part of the pre-job offer background investigation, is not subject to disclosure during this portion of the hiring process.

Indio Police Department Advisement to Applicant

The purpose of a pre-employment background investigation, for all intents and purposes, is to verify that the application you have submitted and any statements you have made to the Indio Police Department, concerning your qualifications are true. The California Courts have held that an employer has a legal duty to know the persons whom it employs. In some cases, California Law may mandate a background investigation before employment, while in other cases it is merely a case of public policy or prudence before placing someone in a position of public trust.

Both State and Federal Courts have also held that there is an absolute necessity for public employees to be truthful. You must understand that a lack of truthfulness or deception of any type on your part will automatically and irrevocably result in your application being rejected from further consideration. For some people, there may be one or more incidents or occurrences in their background which they regret, or over which they may feel some embarrassment. A prospective employer will not make inquiries into areas of a person's background which have no legitimate bearing on their qualifications for the job. However, you should understand that the mere presence of so called "negative" information in your background is not automatically disqualifying. For example, an applicant may have engaged in petty thievery as a child, have used illegal drugs, may have been fired from a job, or even have been convicted of a crime as an adult. While these things, in and of themselves, may not automatically remove that person from consideration for a job, lying about them will.

A pre-employment background investigation is not intended to be an intimidating experience or an unwarranted invasion into your privacy. Your background investigator will contact persons who know you, including present and/or former employers, and will examine official documents and records concerning you to assure that you have been honest in your application in order to fulfill the legal mandates imposed by the courts and the legislature. The more forthright you have been, the greater the likelihood that your background can be completed in a timely and successful manner.

CERTIFICATION

I understand that any false statements and/or deliberate misrepresentations, whether by omission or commission, will result in my application being automatically and irrevocably rejected from further consideration. I certify that I have read the above statement, understand its contents, and have been furnished a copy of it.

Date

Read and answer the following questions carefully and honestly. A "Yes" answer may not, in and of itself, be grounds for disqualification or non-selection, whereas an untruthful response will be. Answers are also subject to verification by a polygraph examination and / or medical examination, including but not limited to, a drug screening. Any questions answered "Yes" require a thorough explanation, which requires more than just a few words. Create and submit a Microsoft Word Document to complete your explanations for each "Yes" answer or attach an additional page. This document must be submitted with your completed Pre-investigative Questionnaire.
